Lord Clive's health was broken by his hard work and the hot damp climate of Bengal, and after two years he sailed to England never to return. When we think of what he did in this country we see that he founded the British Empire in India. Beside the twenty-four Parganas and the Northern Circars, which he won for the Company during his first term of office at Calcutta, he obtained for it during his second governorship the whole of Bengal and Behar. This territory was larger than many European kingdoms. Clive was first a merchant, then a soldier, and last of all a statesman. While we cannot forget or excuse one lie, which he told and acted, we must remember that he was splendidly brave, that he served his masters faithfully and that he established order.

When Lord Clive left India in 1767 a war was just about to begin between the English at Madras and a new foe. This foe was Haidar Ali of Mysore. Haidar Ali was a Muhammadan soldier, who had been taken into the service of the Maharaja of Mysore. He soon showed that he was an able general, and he was given the command of one of the divisions of the army along with the management of the Carnatic District.

The Town.

The distinguishing feature of the early village life was that each house-hold was self-sufficient, it provided entirely for its own needs. But in the town we shall find a community in which the members are working mainly if not entirely to supply the wants of others, and thus indirectly to supply their own. This will become more evident when we have considered the causes which led Englishmen to exchange the free and open life of the country for the more restricted life of the town. In one aspect the early town was little more than a large village in which the residential part was enclosed by some kind of protection such as a wall or a stockade, the cattle and pasture lands lying round it on the outside. The need of defence was thus a possible all-sufficient reason for living in such fortified places, in fact town-life in England is said to date from the time of the Roman conquest. But in another respect the town is an economic unit of a different type altogether from the village. The origin of towns has been traced to many different causes. In one case it may have been due to the establishment of a military post; in another to the existence of some centre of religious life such as a monastery, a cathedral, or a shrine; in a third to the meeting of traders at some spot geographically convenient.

Testimonials.

I have this day visited the Free Ayurvedic Dispensary conducted by Pandit J. Lakshminarasimha Iyengar of Chinora. I have found him learned and also having practical experience. The specimens of drugs stored by him show that he takes good care in the preparation of his medicines. I can safely recommend him for treatment of even serious diseases according to Ayurveda.

I wish more facilities are given to him by way of giving his dispensary better accommodation and more efficient assistance. all cost of medicines for use in the dispensary should be met by the public and not left to the slender means of the Physician however philanthrophic he may be. I wish Pandit Lakshmi Narasimha Iyengar every success.

Where there is no rain nothing grows, and there is a desert; So there is a very large desert in the North of Africa, the Sahara. It is not quite true, however, to say that nothing grows on the Sahara. Parts of the Sahara are low; some of the water from the higher land on each side soaks into the ground, and goes slowly down towards the lowest place. Where ever there are very low places in the Sahara, they may, therefore, be wet; and in a piece of low wet land of this kind date palms may grow. Dates grow best in this way, for there is no rain to spoil the fruit, but there is plenty of water at the roots of the tree.

[illegible] No 26
30th June 1909.

To-day, we having taken our tea at home, we went to the Crystal Palace. We drove to the Victoria Station, took our seat in a train and started. The Railway looked down on the tops of the houses. Not in place of them places and continually did the train pass either over the house tops or through the tunnels. It took us twenty minutes to the Crystal Palace Station. There we alighted and went up to the stair case of the building (where) there were innumerable women and men. We bought a few pictures and other things. The readers in the bazaar are all women. Nearly every description were there ... is the history of the building.

Twenty years ago the English Government made the Exhibition Bazaar in Hyde Park which is in the town of London. When it was over, some members of the committee) thought the matter over, outside the town, set it up again, in the very style and establish a perpetual exhibition, with refreshment rooms (at hotels).

They have made a place of recreation for the people of London. They have set up fountains, basins, parks, gardens, and every thing that can amuse people. It is now the best place of amusement in London. Every day without intermission about seven or eight thousand people do here, or, remaining at home,

Lord Clive's health was broken by his hard work and the hot damp climate of Bengal, and after two years he sailed to England never to return. When we think of what he did in this country, we see that he founded the British Empire in India. Besides the twenty-four Parganas and the Northern Circars, which he won for the Company during his first term of office at Calcutta, he obtained for it during his second Governorship the whole of Bengal and Bihar. This territory was larger than many European kingdoms. Clive was first a merchant, then a Soldier, and last of all a Statesman. While we cannot forget or excuse one lie, which he told and acted, we must remember that he was splendidly brave, that he served his masters faithfully, and that he established Empire.

When Lord Clive left India in 1767, a war was just about to begin between the English at Madras and a new foe. This foe was Haidar Ali of Mysore. Haidar Ali was a Muhammadan Soldier, who had been taken into the service of the Maharaja of Mysore. He soon showed that he was an able General, and he was given the Command of one of the divisions of the army along with the management of the Coimbatore district.

England had to fight many battles against Napolean on the Sea. The greatest of the English Sea-man was Nelson who saved England from Napolean. Nelson even as a boy was very brave and had a high sense of honour. One day he was missing for hours together. He was found siting quietly by a stream. When he was asked whether he had no fear he enquired, wondering what fear was. Another day when the Snow was heavy both he and his brother returned having gone some distance to School. They told their father the snow was too heavy on the way. Then their father left the matter of going to School to their sense of honour. Again both the children started to School. When his brother had a great mind to return once more Nelson would not do it. When he was yet a boy Nelson wished to go to Sea. His uncle was a Sea-men, who wished that Nelson should become a Sailor. He Served in many Ships and went on distant Voyages.

The higher our aims the greater should be our sacrifice. Before all hardships we should patiently submit ourselves with the hope that will certainly help the nation that is determined on its purpose with justice and righteousness on its side. It is most probable that I may not be crying long among you that I have conveyed to you my message. If today I were to die I will carry with me a peaceful mind and my last advice to you is that you should struggle patiently to accomplish your object. It is you who should keep alive your national honour, it is you who should be the helpers of your cause, it is you who should lay the foundation for your uplift and it is you who should be the younger generation of this motherland of Egypt. I bow my head before you all in humble respect and join my voice with yours in uttering "Long Life to Egypt!" and "Freedom be to her nation!".

The election returns are not yet complete and will not be till after the 15th inst. but as most of the results have been announced it is possible to form a rough idea of the political complexion of the Council as a whole. Many of the candidates have yet to declare their political faith, but so far as they have done so the results are interesting. From the table of the elected candidates which we have prepared and publish elsewhere it will be gathered that out of the 83 members who have so far been elected some 30 belong to the justice Party the discontented element thereof included. The number of Brahmins does not exceed 12. The Swarajists also are in a considerable minority but they have scored some ten seats. If you wish to write at a high rate, you must read and master the rules so as to follow them fully and be able to apply them on all occasions. I feel that you cannot fail to follow in the true and right way if you will only try. The race is to the sure and not to the strong. Do not tarry by the way. Remember the fable of the feable tortise that outstripped the hare. Master one thing at a time, and you are sure to win. Set apart for study a small portion of each day. Have patience; "Rome was built in a day". High hills grow less as we ascend them. That which is lightly got is lately valued. If you would get gold, you must dig deeply: it is not got on the surface. Neither can you enter on the position of learning without some trouble. If you would obtain a high position, you must not be beaten by what is difficult. Let your letters be neat and light: a large and heavy style waste time.

A Preliminary meeting was held in our Masonick Hall last Saturday to consider the preservation of the Park Society for the use of the general public. Several peculiar Circumstances have prejudiced the consideration of the matter in the past, and the peculiarities of the case would be published in the Newspaper arrested the attention of the many local celebrates who saw that action was necessary if the dignity of the town was to be upheld. The Society contains some very old ruins, in the perpendicular style of architecture and its history is somewhat hidden in optimic; but the buildings are in such a dilapidated condition that it is now deemed wise to protect them from further decay. It is said that if the prerogative of a local law were exercised, in all probability none of the land would be available for the use of democratic, but as this is very improbable, we need not enter upon a controversial topic which might cause us to show any but benignant feelings.

Of the five applications for the Hakim's post received from your office, Messrs. H. A. Majeed Khan and Syed Ahmed were qualified in the Tibbia College, Delhi - one was qualified in the Nizam's College, Hyderabad (Deccan), and the remaining two are stated to be practising Hakims. It was considered better to make a selection from among persons holding qualification certificates of the Delhi College. The Mysore Government have for some years been sending scholars to the Delhi College with stipends and these are bound to serve the State, if called upon to do so. A list of the scholars who completed their course is maintained in this office and there are five of them in the order shown in margin. These scholars have also been from time to time submitting applications to this office and to Government, for employment, and they are informed by me that their cases would receive consideration in the order of their seniority and according to vacancies. Correspondence ending with letter No. G.C.337-1 dated 5th August 1925 from the Senior Surgeon in Mysore proposing that all technical appointments in the Medical Department viz., Doctors (including Vaidyas and Hakims), Matrons, Assistant Matrons, Nurses, Compounders, Midwives, etc., may be excluded from the scope of the Central Recruitment Board.

2. The following resolution of the Central Recruitment Board recorded at its 24th Meeting on the above subject:-

"The Board resolved that the recommendation of the Senior Surgeon may be accepted except in the case of Doctors. The Board was of opinion that Sub Assistant Surgeons may also be appointed in cases of urgency without advertisement, but subject to the principles of recruitment and that such appointments should be reported to the Board for information".

ORDER NO.G.8025-7/MED.64-25-25 DATED 3RD APRIL 1926.

It was brought to the notice of Government by the Senior Surgeon that the inclusion of the technical appointments of the Medical Department within the scope of the Central Recruitment Board served no useful purpose and frequently led to delay in making these appointments. He pointed out that the qualifications required for these appointments were of a technical character, that the Medical Department maintained, in most cases, a list of the persons possessing these qualifications and that the selection of suitable candidates could easily be made without reference to the Central Recruitment Board. The matter was referred to the Central Recruitment Board and their opinion is contained in the resolution read above. Government are pleased to accept this opinion and direct that the appointments of Midwives, Compounders, Nurses, Vaidyans, Hakims, Matrons and Assistant Matrons shall be outside the scope of the Central Recruitment Board. The appointments of Sub Assistant Surgeons and higher Medical Officers shall be made according to the rules now in force, but in cases of special urgency, the Senior Surgeon will be at liberty to appoint Sub Assistant Surgeons without reference to the Central Recruitment Board.

All appointments made by the Senior Surgeon under this order shall be in strict accordance with the rules of recruitment and shall be reported to the Central Recruitment Board from time to time.
